Our goals and concept for this year

Transport Week is a time when we all come together to bring to the global table experiences, lessons learned, solutions and open questions. This year will be dedicated to spot achievements, connecting solutions, integrating approaches, and calling for action, with activities stemming from these objectives.

Invitation to Act	Multisectoral Urban Mobility	Standards & Innovation	The Climate Commitment	Tracking Change
On Monday 4 November, #TransportWeek24 will kick off with an official welcome from the authorities, followed by a keynote speech. We will have an honest conversation about political leadership and adaptive change.	Tuesday 5 November will be dedicated to multisectoral cooperation and gender transformative systems to achieve affordable and sustainable urban mobility. The second day will be dedicated to learning from the regional experiences in the Western Balkans.	On Wednesday, the regional perspective from Africa will provide benchmarking with proven solutions and an invitation not to reinvent the wheel. We will address adaptation in transport. As part of the day, we will open up to the wider ecosystem conversing about fuel roadmaps. We will close knowing the regional perspective from Latin America.	Thursday will be our Conference Day, time for climate commitment. This year, the regional Asian perspective will invite us to achieve the NDC targets. Standards in transition with a truck decarbonisation perspective and a vehicle efficiency analysis. The peak of the week will be a message for future transport climate action to be delivered to the UNFCCC COP 29 in Baku.	On Friday, the week will conclude with a discussion on tools for tracking change and the role of think tanks. As farewell of the week, we will share the concept for Transport and Climate Change Week 2025, the 8th edition of which will be hosted in person in Berlin.
